A divorce case, which has been lately pending in our courts, and to which has attached something of interest, was decided on Wednesday by Judge Meredith, who issued a decree in favor of Mrs. Jessic B. Harvie, plaintiff, absolving her from the matrimonial bonds formerly existing between herself and

The suit was prosecuted by A. Moise, Jr., counsel for the plaintiff, who is a well known, pretty and popular ex-actress and danseuse, having formerly figured on a stage under her maiden name of Jessie Warner, and, rumor says, that, undaunted by the unfortunate termination of love's first young dream, the fair divorced proposes soon to link herself in hymenial bonds with some other daring spirit. The husband found consolation in the loss. of his wife by the unexpected gain of a fortune, for on the very day on which the divorce was granted he received a letter from his father (who was supposed to be dead), announcing his return from foreign parts, and offering his son the sum of $12,000 with which to commence business .- Richmond Enquirer.

An Important Bill.

We have been frequently interrogated in regard to the provisions of the bill passed by the Legislature of Virginia at its session of Hartford, Connecticut. The particulars are last winter, in reference to the maintenance | given by the Hartford Post, as follows: of the rights and jurisdiction of Virginia over the counties of Jefferson and Berkeley. For the information of our readers, we publish below, from the Acts of Assembly, the bill as it passed the two houses of the Legislature :-

IF, am the St. Louis Democrat, 12th 1 Suicide of an Editor of the Atlanta Era.

About a week ago, Dr. B. L. Seago, as sistant editor of the Atlan ta Era, arrived in this city, and took a room 12 the fifth story of the Southern Hotel. He appeared quite melancholy, and had but little to say to any one about the hotel. On Thursday, bills were sent to the office from an apothecary for one ounce of morphine and three prescriptions composed of morphine and chloroform. The last seen of him was on Friday night. At 2 o'clock yesterday (Sunday) his room was entered through the transom, and his dead body found lying on the bed. Coroner O'Reilly was summoned, and an inquest was held. Several letters written by the deceased a short time before his death were found on the table, showing that he had taken his own life. No money was found among his effects, nor had he deposited any at the office of the hotel. He was about thirty years of age. Several letters, written in pencil, were found.

This is my fourth and last dose. I am getting quite sleepy, and soon will be gone. Welcome, Oh, death! To live is to suffer THE SUICIDE'S LAST MOMENTS. unutterably; to die is to be at rest. Much I could write, but brevity must be the style now. I only desire to be remem-bered kindly. Let those who love me love my memory. If I have wronged any man, let him forgive, as he would wish to be forgiven. But one word for her who alone has won my love. She who had evidence of my love five years ago still reigns alone in my heart. Day before yesterday I sent her a few lines, which, when she receives them, she will recognize, though there is no signature to them. May God bless her, and deal the broad glare of noonday. It was as if a with her tenderly Let no wave of sorrow ever cross her breast; no misfortune ever cast its blighting shadow upon her soul. I am too sleepy to write well, and can only say, good-byc. Oh, shall we never meet! While our hope and bliss are young, * * * bur no more, Alas! alas! shall I meet her no more. God bless her. Her name is Delia, and I desire that this may be sent to her through my uncle, H. R. Seago.

Good bye to all. May God in his mercy bless all who have ever loved me. I am now getting very sleepy, but oh, sweet is the bic splendors across the bow of the slumber-death that relieves the soul from the anguish, ing Shawangunk. It is not strange that the animals on the premises shared the wonder and amazement which possessed the people. This was manifested by the mingling of their own peculiar

With a deep guttural groan, and still send-ing forth his fiery breathings, this Minotaur, man, beast, or demon, lifted his disgusting and scaly digits, and, slowly and with pro-voking deliberation, passed them over the face and person of each member of the affrighted family, with a yell that seemed to shake the building from foundation to rafters, then leaped through the open door at the rear of the house, rushed into the forest, and was soom lost in its pervading gloom and dark-

There was no sleep in that dwelling on this eventful night; and the next morning no traces of the phenomenon could be discerned. except that along the track of the strange visitor were found some small particles resembling crushed lava, and the sulphurous and phosphorescent odor which filled the house was proof positive to the inmates that they had not been dreaming.

To the Women of the South.

Richmond is begirt with an army of Confederate dead. The hallowed previncts of our cemeteries are rendered still more sacred by their graves—to be counted by tens of thousands of martyred beroes; around us were bloody battle-fields, and here were thus most crowded hospitals. The dead of both arc sleeping at Hollywood and Oakwood:-Not alone-the fallen of Virginia are buried here. Your loved and lost, brave and chivalrous spirits, whom we, too, learn to love, re-pose side by side, with ours. The greater proportion of your best and bravest young nen, cheered by your blessing and strengthened by your prayers, came to Virginia to battle for our cause.

Many, oh! how many of them fell on battle fields, or died in hospitals, the victims of disease engendered by the exposure of arduous campaigns?

The Schoolmaster's in that Bed.

H. Macfarland, President.

The following is one of the many incidents that befell a "boarding round schoolmaster:" I had been teaching in Lewis county, in this State, and this term was boarding round. One evening, after school, one of my scholars stepped up to me and said: "Mr. Jones, father said you would come home with me." "Very well," I replied, and forthwith set out for my patron's house, which was distant some two miles. Now, be it known, that James McHarry—for such was his name had two daughters, the pride and envy of the whole community. I had heard so much about them that I was anxious to see them. It seemed, however, I was to be disappointed.

When we arrived I learned that the girls had gone to a party the other side of the creek; so I went to bed execrating the luck which deprived me of seeing them that night. The night was well advanced when I heard one of the girls come home, and massing into an adjoining room the passing into an adjoining room she warmed herself before some coals which were alive on the hearth. It seems the old gentleman and lady slept in the same room, which I was not aware of then. Having warmed herself. she turned to leave the room, when the old "Girls," said he, "the schoolmaster's in your bed." Wery well," said Sarah, and passing through the room I slept in, went up stairs. About an hour had elapsed when I heard Judy the other Judy, the other one, come. She stood at the door a long time, taiking with her "sweetheart," then entered softly. Disrobing her feet, she entered the room where I lay, in her stocking feet, carefully undressing herself, and coming to the side of the bed, prepared to get in. Now, it happened I lay in the middle, and turning back the clothes, she gave me a shake, and said in a suppressed whisper: "Lay over, Sarah."

I rolled over and whipped the corner of the pillow in my mouth to keep from laughing. In she bounced, but the bed would squeak. the earth; the rustling of the trees and low mouning of the winds alone broke the op-The old man heard it and called out: "Judy!" But a new and more astounding scene was soon to follow. While the family were exthe bed beside me.
"The schoolmaster's in that bed?"
With one loud yell, and "Ob, heaven?"
she landed on the floor, and fled with the rapidity of a deer up stairs. She never heard the last of that, I can tell you.

Your ladies should never when theing and feel of the press.
